DOG'S QUEER TASTE.

Fend of Lemons, He Will Do Many Tricks to Get Them.

Ted is a fox terrier with some additions and variations, inheriten, it is said, from his mother. Indeed, says the Indianapolis News, a stranger unacquainted with his many talents, might, at first, insinuate that he was a cur, but none of Ted's many friends would ever think of mentioning the deficiencies of his pedigree to Ted. He is the pride of the neighborhood. His master, George W. Reid, is a mall carrier, and Ted is known to all the force. But it is his mistress, Mrs. Reid, that Ted owes his education, and it is apon her that he lavishes most of his canine affection.

Mrs. Reid discovered Ted's appetite for lemons last winter. She had noticed his playing with an orange, and it may be that at his first sight of a lemon he confused the identity of the two fruits. She had a sack of lemons in her hand, and Ted began to beg for one most vociferously. Thinking the first taste would cure him of his greediness, Mrs. Reid gave him a lemon. From that time Ted has made a daily demand for lemons, and he has never been denied. The yards in his neighborhood bear witness to Ted's appetite. Lemons are scattered about for nearly a block. When he is tired of playing Ted will lie for hours NERVOUS DISEASES and chronic with his nose close to a lemon, symptom blanks free whether you take treatment of not. Write today.

Ted had been playing with an old lemon which he had long before sucked dry, when his mistress remarked in an ordinary tone, paying no heed to the dog, that she gussed she would get a fresh lemon. Ted was instantly on the alert. No more stale lemons for him! In an instant he was in the house before the cupboard, where his joy was not longer deferred, though he had by no means exhausted his repertoire. After saying "please," by standing on his hind legs, folding his forepaws and whirming in a supplicating manner, the lemon was his, and he proceeded to devour it with a sense of duty accomplished.

Science in the Ring.

Modern science has even stepped into the prize ring. A secret of the recent Corbett-Jeffries prize fight is now out. Corbett's seconds decided to employ oxygen instead of the old method of waving fans and towels. A tank of oxygen veas concealed under the ring plat form in Corbett's corner. Fo this was attached a long rubber tube, on the end of which was a spraying machine. As he returned to his corner each time a stream of oxygen was sprayed on his face.
